

Storm Preparation Tips for Large Animals

Residents who own horses or other large animals are encouraged to make preparations early in anticipation of a hurricane. Tips on how to make hurricane preparations for large animals are available online from the Broward County Extension Education Division.

Residents who own horses or other large animals are encouraged to make preparations early in anticipation of a hurricane. Tips on how to make hurricane preparations for large animals are available online from the Broward County Extension Education Division.

The site provides information on proper identification for horses and other large animals, preparation for barns and pastures, correct ways to restrain horses and other large animals, and planning food, water and hay supplies in the event of a hurricane. Owners should plan on at least a five-day supply of food, water and medical supplies for their horses and other animals in the event of a storm.

The site also includes an online large animal registry. Owners can register their animals and include detailed information on physical traits to help them identify their animals if they become lost. The information is made available to veterinarians and other medical or emergency responders in the event animals become lost. Click here to register.

Additional tips for preparing for a hurricane are available online on the Broward County Website. For more information, residents can also call the Broward County Hurricane Hotline at (954) 831-4000.